I want to share with you a special interactive exercise that will give you a quick overview of how to achieve some very impressive looks, but it's not necessary that you take part in it. In fact, it's not nearly as effective if you don't have Photoshop! The image below... If you aren't familiar with how the color wheels work, you'll still be able to achieve great results. Here's the guide to how to use the color wheels with the levels (or luminance) control:
Start by selecting a color in the hue boxes. Next, you'll place the red and green LEDs over the color boxes so that their orientation matches with the hue you are selecting. Depending on the shift you select, the balance of the colors can shift lightness or darkness when you are on an orange or a blue hue. This can be fun if you wanted to light up a text or edit a particular skin tone but if you're using the hue control and don't like how the swap ends up, you can always disable it or create your own color swap. While the hue control is great when doing quick edits to colors or simply need some balance, you could also test out the color wheels if you're looking for a more detailed look. It is also possible to enable or disable a color mask. When you apply a color mask, only certain parts of the image change color and only those parts that the mask covers change colors. The color mask tool can also help in the creation of textures, ribbon, and geometric shapes. To apply a color mask to a selection, go to the Adjustments panel, choose the Select photo menu, and choose the Colorization Mask tool. After you've selected the color you want to colorize, place the color LED next to the specific parts of the picture you'd like to colorize. 933d7f57e6
